Reviews for the festival:

"As British music festivals go, Birmingham's annual Supersonic event is the best kind of mixed musical bag, a dizzying assortment of avant rock textures and Heavy Metal thunder on a bill which swings from the sublime to the ridiculous without once seeming ostentatiously eclectic...The organisers of Supersonic deserve credit for joining the dots between the cerebral pleasures of the avant garde and the primal pull of planet rock, striking a delicate balance between chin-stroking and headbanging few other British events bother to attempt. One would like to think that Supersonic could provide a good example to the UK's ailing - in terms of quality, rather than lucrateness - festival circuit." - The Wire 2006

"Despite the UK's terribly impressive track record in electronic music, there's only one festival that can match up to the standards of Sonar or Dissonanze; Birmingham's Supersonic., housed in the legendary Custard Factory compound. This year as usual, they've put together a terrifying portfolio of artists to exacerbate those irritating ear problems while indulging in Epicurean delights." - i-d magazine July 05 Jeremy Abbott
